General Standard Terms and Conditions for participation in the International Conference on Natural Family Planning by Malteser Arbeitsgruppe NFP.

Registration

The procedures for registration can be found in the relevant notice advertising the course/opportunity in question. Registration must be made in writing (letter, fax or e-mail) using the registration form. Once registration has taken place, confirmation of receipt will be issued. Registration is binding once the contribution for the course/development opportunity has been paid, and can only be cancelled under the conditions set out under "Deregistration/cancellation" below. The consumer's statutory right of withdrawal is not thereby affected. Registration does not confer an automatic right to participate.

Deregistration/cancellation

Cancellation must always be made in writing.

Cancellation periods:

Up to 41 calendar days before start of course/development opportunity, free of charge

40 to 31 calendar days before start of course/development opportunity, 40% of the contribution for the course/development opportunity

30 to 15 calendar days before start of course/development opportunity, 60% of the contribution for the course/development opportunity

14 to 3 calendar days before start of course/development opportunity, 80% of the contribution for the course/development opportunity

2 to 0 calendar days before start of course/development opportunity, 100% of the contribution for the course/development opportunity

A substitute participant may of course be nominated at any time. Where a contract is signed with the latter, the cancellation charge will no longer apply.

If the participant can show that the loss sustained by Malteser Werke is substantially smaller than that implied by the cancellation charge, then, instead of the cancellation charge, an amount should be paid that compensates the loss in question. If the participant can show that Malteser Werke has sustained no loss at all, the cancellation charge will be waived.

Cancellation of events

Malteser Werke reserves the right to cancel the relevant training courses and development opportunities if there are compelling reasons for it to do so. The participants will be informed of such cancellation without undue delay. Compelling reasons include an insufficient number of registered participants or other unforeseeable circumstances. If the event does not take place for reasons that are due to Malteser Werke, any course/development opportunity fees that have already been paid will be reimbursed in full. Otherwise, the liability of Malteser Werke is governed by the following special terms and conditions.

Liability

In the event that Malteser Werke, a legal representative or an agent of Malteser Werke is found to be negligent, the liability of Malteser Werke for a material breach of contract is limited to those damages that might typically be foreseen. Otherwise, Malteser Werke cannot be held liable in a case of negligence. Notwithstanding the above, Malteser Werke is liable for damages arising from loss of life, injury or loss of health that are due to an intentional or negligent breach of duty on the part of Malteser Werke or an intentional or negligent breach of duty on the part of an agent of Malteser Werke.

Certificate/evidence of participation

On completion of the further training, development or education that is provided, the participant will receive a certificate/evidence of participation listing the main contents of the course/session.

Right to make changes

Details are subject to alteration during the course of the programme, as is the attendance of the advertised speakers. Such alterations will only be undertaken for compelling reasons, and the overall character and quality standard of the event will be retained. Changes of this nature cannot constitute grounds for withdrawing from the binding registration.
